Changing Times: Lessons from Successful Professionals

Organisations making presentations at this event include:

What is this Conference About?

Northern Ireland's leading newspaper has teamed up with Northern Ireland's leading HR and employment law training provider to produce what we think will be the premier HR event in Northern Ireland – this year and every year.

Conference Overview

This event has three panel discussions in the morning. Afternoon sessions give delegates a choice from a series of practical workshops and presentations on topical HR and employment law issues.

- In our first panel discussion two senior professionals consider decision-making processes in the face of public scrutiny in Northern Ireland:

Judith Gillespie, Deputy Chief Constable, PSNI, considers the topic of "Interim Judgement" in our highest-profile organisation and Pauline Shepherd, Director of Human Resources, NI Water, focuses on HR's input to modernisation: re-structuring, re-skilling and driving high performance to deliver customer services.

What would you do, knowing that the cameras are on you?

- In the second panel discussion three speakers consider how operating in a global economy has impacted on their organisation and how they carry out their functions:

Shauna Hughes, Regional Manager in charge of Organisational Effectiveness and Engagement, Caterpillar, considers how to maintain motivation and contact in a worldwide organisation; Linda Magee, Global HR Manager, Randox Laboratories, considers HR's role in developing a global organisation; and Williams Johnson, Managing Director, Great Place to Work® Institute UK, sets out how building trust was the key to the success of many successful global players.

- In the third panel discussion two speakers consider issues of vital importance on how your organisation is perceived by the outside world and what you can do internally to influence those external perceptions:

Leon Hill-Foster, Head of Diversity, B&Q, puts the business case for diversity in achieving success; and Bev Lowry, previously Head of Internal Communications, British Airways, spells out how good communications at times of trouble impacts at the time and beyond the immediate crisis.

Each of the panel presentations is followed by a debate and open forum: your chance to put questions and comment to the panel.

Afternoon sessions are practical workshops on issues suggested and rated by our HR customers. See opposite page for details.

Who Should Attend?

This conference is an essential event for HR professionals and other people managers who want to get the best out of the best human resources available in these recessionary times and who want to improve their own performance.

Morning Programme

Theme/Time	Speakers and Sessions
9.20	Introduction and Set Up: Scott Alexander, Legal-Island
9.30	Welcome Address: Richard McClean, Independent News and Media
9.40 Time is of the Essence:	Interim Judgement. You have to run the highest-profile organisation in Northern Ireland whilst awaiting the appointment of a permanent superior officer. A mistake could ruin reputations and make life very difficult for the new boss. What do you do, knowing that the cameras are on you? Judith Gillespie, Deputy Chief Constable, PSNI Working in a fish bowl. How can HR add value and transform the business at break-neck speed under the media spotlight? Pauline Shepherd, HR Director, NI Water
10.20	Debate and Open Forum: Your chance to put questions and comment to the panel
10.30	Networking and Refreshments
11.00 Reflections on the Outside World	Three speakers consider how operating in a global economy has impacted on their organisation and how they carry out their functions: Remote Control. Shauna Hughes is a Regional Manager in charge of Organisational Effectiveness and Engagement for Caterpillar . But her "region" covers Europe, Africa, Middle East and Asia Pacific. So how can you maintain motivation and contact without physical meetings in a global economy and what are the lessons for smaller organisations? Keeping it in the Family. How do you grow a multi-million pound, worldwide business yet remain a family firm based in Northern Ireland? Linda Magee, Global HR Manager, Randox Laboratories , takes us from vision to achievement and outlines the role of HR in the process. Sustaining Workplace Excellence in a Downturn. Many of the largest organisations in the world struggled in the recession but those who did best had built a high-trust culture from the top down to gain competitive advantage. Williams Johnson, Managing Director, Great Place to Work® Institute UK
11.45	Debate and Open Forum: Your chance to put questions and comment to the panel
12.00 Reflecting to the Outside World	Two speakers consider issues of vital importance on how your organisation is perceived by the outside world and what you can do internally to influence those external perceptions: Diversity at our Core: B&Q is renowned for its diverse workforce. Leon Hill-Foster, Head of Diversity , puts the business case for diversity and explains how it has helped the organisation succeed where others have failed in the recession. Communicating during a crisis: Bev Lowry was Head of Internal Communications for British Airways during some of its most difficult times as well as the good. She spells out how good communications at times of trouble impacts at the time and beyond the immediate crisis and how essential it is for HR and communications professionals to work closely together.
12.45	Debate and Open Forum: Your chance to put questions and comment to the panel
1.00	Networking and Lunch

Afternoon Programme

Delegates may choose from a list of topical sessions set out in two parallel streams as suggested by our HR professional customers. Some sessions will be finalised nearer the time to ensure that they are absolutely current to the needs of Northern Ireland's HR professionals. Notes from all parallel sessions will be included in delegate packs. Confirmed topics include:

- HR Strategy: How to implement a strategic healthy workplace plan. Templates, check-lists and precedents provided. (Tanya Kennedy, Business in the Community)
- Dispute Resolution Procedures – what are the latest developments for HR departments to consider in the light of expected changes? (Lisa Bryson, Carson McDowell)
- HR Strategy: Lessons for HR strategists from a large merger and integration programme. Templates, checklists and precedents provided. (George Alexander, Alexander HR)
- How might employers handle the termination of older workers' employment contracts in the light of the imminent removal of the default retirement age? (Rachel Penny, Carson McDowell)
- What practical measures can I take to encourage long-term sick employees to return to work? A Case study. (John Conaghan, Carecall)
- How might employers set a medical questionnaire and avoid unexpected health problems from prospective employees – if at all? (Orlagh O'Neill, Carson McDowell)
- HR Strategy: Personal Strategies. How do you move from HR practitioner to leading corporate strategist? What must you take on? How can you convince decision makers that you and your HR strategy are just what they need? (Gillian Esquivel, 30-40-30)
